

Biography

Aron Newman received M.S. and Ph.D. degrees in materials science and engineering from the State University of New York at Stony Brook in 1995 and in 1998, respectively. From 1998 to 2000, he worked at Argonne National Laboratory as a postdoctoral appointee. From 2000 to 2003, he worked as a staff technology engineer at Eveready Battery Company, Energizer Holdings Inc. In his next position at Physical Sciences from 2004-2010, Inc. he moved from principal scientist to group leader. Since 2010, Dr. Newman is with Booz Allen Hamilton, where he started as an associate is now a lead associate. He is primarily serving the Advanced Research Project Agency – Energy (ARPA-E), Department of Energy, as a subject matter expert including electrochemistry, batteries, fuel cells, and energy storage.