

Captain Bob Brown

The transportation of lithium-ion batteries on aircraft represents a clear and present danger to both flight crew and passengers. The purpose of this presentation is to highlight current and proposed mitigation strategies to address the risk. In addition, efforts underway by the Lithium Battery Air Safety Advisory Committee to address concerns will be discussed.